Read the following passage, then choose the correct answer from a, b, c or d:

You do not need to look back twenty years to realize the tremendous developments in science and technology; and how these advances are changing the life style of millions of people all over the world. Although the television and video were there in those days, no one had heard then of those wonderful remote-control units that turn the equipment on and off helping us to choose our entertainment with the least physical effort.

There are many other effects of technology that made our life more comfortable. You no longer worry about washing the dishes; your dishwashing machine can take care of that. If you want a hot meal, you just pop your favourite food into the microwave oven and it is ready in minutes. If you want to send an urgent message, just write it down and send, it through your fax machine and it arrives on the other side of the world in seconds. Passenger planes fly non-stop to different parts of the world and their pilots can find time to relax as the computers do most of the hard work for them. This gives people more time to enjoy themselves and it explains the remarkable current progress in the leisure industry.

Leisure today is a big business. Just read the advertisement in the newspaper. You just will not believe the variety; you will find something to fit all incomes and tastes. As robots take over the work of people in industry, as communications across the world become faster, and while technology continues to create ways of persuading us to work less and enjoy ourselves more, so the leisure industry will play a far more important role in the lives of us all.

Read the following passage, then choose the correct answer from a, b, c or d:

With the birth of the big cities and their exploding population has become the problem of getting rid of their wastes. Many people believe that these cities will eventually bury themselves in their own rubbish unless something is done, and done quickly. They support their argument by stating that in 1985 Mexico City produced 6,000 more tons of rubbish than could be collected.

The worries about land pollution, shortage of natural resources (especially wood and oil), increasing costs of raw materials and growing unemployment all point to one solution: recycling. Recyclable waste falls into seven basic groups: paper, glass, plastics, metals, rags, bones and organic matter. The first five groups can be recycled to produce similar products a second time. Organic matter can be used to feed animals or used as fertilizer. Bones produce fat, gelatin and calcium which can be used in animal feed or to make filters.

Among the many advantages of recycling are: saving valuable natural resources, preventing land pollution, saving manufacturers' money, creating a lot of jobs (to recycle the waste of Cairo would need 17,000 - 20,000 collectors, 6,000 sorters plus transporters, processors ...etc.), creating new small businesses which can supply many of the major industries and generating money (e.g. in Cairo, if all the rubbish that could be recycled was recycled, it would generate $ 73, 467 a day).

For recycling to be a success, it needs the support of the government in supplying areas for dumping, sorting and recycling, and to launch a campaign to persuade the public to co-operate. It needs experts to find suitable people or companies to recycle each material.

All the way along the line, from the collector to the seller of the recycled product, there has to be an acceptable income. In this way, meeting this demand is easier in the developing world, where people are on lower incomes, than in developed countries where expectations of reward are higher.

The Rise of Artificial Intelligence

Artificial Intelligence (AI) refers to the simulation of human intelligence in machines that are programmed to think and learn like humans. Over the past few decades, AI has seen rapid development and has become an integral part of various industries, such as healthcare, finance, transportation, and entertainment.

AI systems are capable of performing tasks that typically require human intelligence, such as visual perception, speech recognition, decision-making, and language translation. One of the most well-known applications of AI is in virtual assistants, like Siri and Alexa, which can perform a wide range of tasks based on voice commands.

In healthcare, AI is being used to improve diagnostics and treatment plans by analyzing large amounts of medical data. We should be proud of all our Egyptian celebrities in all times. We had many great men in the 19th century who did many wonderful patriotic actions. Mustafa Kamel, an Egyptian nationalist leader, was born in 1874. Witnessing Egypt's struggle under British control, Kamel's spirit of patriotism ignited. He, along with other students, formed a secret society advocating for Egypt's independence. Their actions led to their expulsion from Egypt, forcing Kamel to complete his education in France.

While abroad, Kamel immersed himself in European political ideas, particularly those emphasizing national identity and self-determination. He actively participated in Egyptian student communities, keeping the fight for his homeland alive. Kamel's fiery speeches and passionate articles resonated deeply with the Egyptian people. He challenged the legitimacy of British rule, highlighting its detrimental impact on Egypt's economy and social fabric. He emphasized the importance of education and self-reliance, urging Egyptians to strive for a future free from foreign domination.

Despite facing threats and imprisonment by the British authorities, Mustafa Kamel remained undeterred. He continued to mobilize the masses, organizing peaceful protests and advocating for a boycott of British goods. His unwavering determination and eloquent articulation of Egypt's aspirations earned him the title, "The Voice of the Nation."

Mustafa Kamel's hard efforts, though tragically cut short by illness in 1908, significantly contributed to the rise of Egyptian nationalism. He laid the groundwork for future generations who ultimately achieved Egypt's independence in 1952.

After Mustafa Kamel's death in 1908, leadership of the Egyptian nationalist movement fell to Mohamed Farid. Read the following passage, then choose the correct answer from a, b, c or d:

Our body has many organs which do their functions properly. Each one has a specific job to do to survive. For example your heart, a tireless pump working faithfully day and night, is vital to your very existence. But, what happens when this vital organ is starved of the oxygen it needs? A heart attack, also known as a myocardial infarction, occurs when blood flow to a part of the heart muscle is severely reduced or cut off completely. This disrupts the heart's ability to pump blood effectively, threatening your health and even your life.

The culprit behind most heart attacks is atherosclerosis, a gradual narrowing of the coronary arteries. These arteries supply blood rich in oxygen to the heart muscle. Over time, fatty deposits called plaque buildup on the artery walls, restrict blood flow. A piece of plaque may rupture, triggering the formation of a blood clot that can completely block the artery. This blockage starves the heart muscle of oxygen, leading to cell death and a heart attack.

Symptoms of a heart attack can vary from person to person. The classic image of someone clutching their chest in pain is common, but discomfort can also manifest as pain in the arm, shoulder, jaw, back, or even nausea and lightheadedness. Recognizing these diverse symptoms and seeking immediate medical attention is crucial. Early intervention can minimize heart damage and improve your chances of a full recovery.

Thankfully, there are steps you can take to reduce your risk of a heart attack. Maintaining a healthy lifestyle is key. This includes eating a balanced diet low in saturated fats, exercising regularly, managing stress, and maintaining a healthy weight. Additionally, controlling conditions like high blood pressure and cholesterol can significantly decrease your risk.

By understanding the causes and symptoms of heart attacks, and by prioritizing a heart-healthy lifestyle, you can empower yourself to take charge of your cardiovascular health.

Read the following passage, then choose the correct answer from a, b, c or d:

In recent years, minority-owned businesses in the U.S. have faced both unprecedented opportunities and significant risks. Civil rights activists have long argued that minority groups, such as Blacks and Hispanics, struggle to succeed in business due to lack of access to substantial orders from large companies. In response, Congress passed laws requiring federal contractors to make efforts to engage minority subcontractors. Many government agencies have set goals to allocate public works contracts to minority businesses. Corporate response has been positive, with contracts for minority businesses increasing from $77 million in 1972 to $1.1 billion in 1977, and projections for the early 1980s estimating over $53 billion annually.

However, this growth brings risks for minority businesses. Many are small, requiring large investments in equipment, plants, and staff to handle subcontracted work. If their contracts are reduced, they may face financial difficulties due to fixed expenses. The corporate world can be frustrating for small businesses, with complex bidding processes that consume time and resources.

Additionally, white-owned companies may attempt to exploit the opportunity by forming partnerships with minority firms, sometimes setting up minority businesses as "fronts" instead of true partners. Finally, some minority businesses become overly reliant on a single corporate customer, which limits their ability to expand and make their business sustainable.

a) They decreased significantly.
b) They remained the same.
c) They increased from $77 million to $1.1 billion.
d) They reached $53 billion annually.

16. What potential problem arises from minority businesses depending on one large corporate customer?

Read the following passage then answer the questions below:

"Did you see that, Alex?" Sam exclaimed; his eyes wide with excitement. "You're a natural!" Alex caught the basketball, dribbled it once, and launched it towards the hoop. Swish! The ball sailed through the net. "You never miss, man!" Sam marveled. "Not unless it's a real game," Alex grumbled. "Then I choke every time."

Alex was a different player when he was having fun with Sam at school compared to when he was playing for the school team in front of a crowd. "Maybe you just need more practice," Sam suggested. "But I practice all the time with you!" Alex protested. "I just can't perform under pressure. I always get confused and distracted."

"You play great when I'm watching," Sam pointed out. "That's because I've known you forever," Alex replied, "I just get nervous around other people." Sam nodded understandingly, a mischievous glint in his eye.

The next day, Sam and Alex met on the court as usual. After a few minutes, Sam excused himself. "Keep practicing," he said. "I'll be right back." Sam dashed off, rounding up a few students, a math teacher, and two office workers. When he explained his plan, everyone was eager to help. He reminded them to be quiet as they headed towards the court.

Alex was surprised to see the crowd. "Alex," Sam said, "I just wanted to show you that you can perform, even with people watching. Now, you're ready for the next game!"

The rainforest is often called the 'lungs of the Earth' because it plays an important role in producing oxygen and absorbing carbon dioxide. This vast ecosystem is home to millions of species, from vibrant macaws to elusive tigers, making it one of the most biodiverse regions in the world. Beyond its wildlife, the rainforest sustains countless indigenous communities who depend on it for food, medicine, and cultural practices. These communities have lived in harmony with nature for centuries, preserving the delicate balance of their environment.

Unfortunately, deforestation is threatening this balance. Large areas of rainforest are cleared every year, primarily for agriculture, logging, and urban development. This not only endangers wildlife but also contributes to global warming by releasing stored carbon dioxide into the atmosphere. The Amazon rainforest, the largest in the world, spans nine countries and is crucial in regulating global weather patterns. It also houses countless plant species with potential medicinal properties, many of which remain unstudied.

One major event in the Amazon's recent history was the devastating fires of 2019, largely caused by human activities such as slash-and-burn agriculture. These fires destroyed vast areas of forest, displacing wildlife and original populations. The event sparked global debates about who is responsible for protecting the rainforest. While some argue that economic activities like cattle farming and soybean production are essential for global markets, others warn of the irreversible consequences of biodiversity loss and climate change.

The future of the rainforest depends on striking a balance between progress and preservation. Can humanity find sustainable solutions that protect this invaluable ecosystem, or will short-term economic gains outweigh long-term survival?

Read the following passage, then choose the correct answer from a, b, c, or d:

Keep your watch accurate. For some people, moving up the time on their watch will help them get up earlier. For others, they will remember that the time on the watch is wrong and will disregard it altogether. It may be helpful to set your watch just two minutes ahead instead of five or ten.

Keep a clock, phone, computer or anything that displays time in each room of your house. One of the easiest ways to run late is simply by not realizing that the time is passing as quickly as it is.

Set all your clocks and watches to the same time. Don't be an optimist. Things usually take longer than what you'd expect, even without major delays. If you have a dinner appointment at 7:30 p.m., don't think you can work till 7 p.m., then take a bath, dress and reach on time. Realistically, calculate the time you will take at each step and then add 10 minutes more to allow for unexpected delays, or you cannot get to your job done in time.

Wake up when you are supposed to wake up. Don't hit the snooze button, keep on lying in bed, and watch TV at the very start of your day. Maybe you can try even setting your clock 10 minutes earlier than you need. If you have difficulty with this, move your alarm clock to somewhere away from your bed; that way, you will have to get up to turn it off. Commit yourself to being 15 minutes early for everything.

20. What is the primary advice the passage gives about managing time effectively?
a) Work until the last minute before leaving for an appointment
b) Use a single clock to avoid confusion
c) Set clocks ahead and allow extra time for delays
d) Avoid using alarm clocks in the morning

21. How does the advice of setting clocks slightly ahead compare to using multiple clocks in different rooms?
a) Both help create urgency but serve different purposes
b) Setting clocks ahead is about reminders, while multiple clocks are unnecessary
c) Both methods ensure appointments are never missed
d) Multiple clocks eliminate the need for alarms

22.Which statement best summarizes the overall message of the passage?

a) Keeping accurate time is important for maintaining punctuality and avoiding delays

b) Setting multiple clocks is the only way to manage time effectively

c) Optimism is necessary to manage time successfully

d) Hitting the snooze button can help improve your schedule

23.Why is it recommended to add 10 extra minutes to your schedule?

a) To account for traffic delays

b) To ensure everything is done with precision

c) To allow time for unexpected delays

d) To keep your watch accurate

24.What might happen if someone relies on optimistic time estimates?

a) They will complete tasks more efficiently

b) They are likely to underestimate the time needed and run late

c) They will wake up earlier

d) They will become more punctual

25.How does setting a clock ahead differ from moving an alarm clock away from the bed?

a) Both address punctuality, but one helps in waking up while the other prevents lateness

b) Setting a clock ahead is unnecessary, while moving the alarm clock is crucial

c) Both methods focus on time management through alarms

d) They are identical in purpose

26.What does the author suggest about time management and optimism?

a) Optimism is helpful for realistic scheduling.
b) Optimism can lead to underestimating how long tasks take.
c) Optimism and time management are unrelated.
d) Optimism is the key to managing time successfully.

27.The author emphasizes committing to being 15 minutes early for everything to……… .

a) ensure productivity and reduce stress from rushing
b) counteract issues with inaccurate clocks
c) make up for time lost hitting the snooze button

My father was a printer, but he was deaf. Though he could not hear, he felt through the soles of his shoes the pounding and rumbling of the giant printing presses that daily spat out the newspaper he helped create.

As a boy, my father learned how to speak with his hands. As a man, he learned how to turn lead-type letters into words and sentences. Sometimes my father felt sad as most of the workers who could hear were unkind. But my father did not lack friends. There were other printers at the plant who were deaf. They had also learned to talk with their hands. One day, while the giant presses ran, my father spotted a fire flickering in a far corner of the pressroom. The fire was spreading quickly, silently. Suddenly, the wood floor burst into flames. My father knew he had to tell everyone. He couldn't speak to shout a warning. But he could speak with his hands. He did not hesitate. He jumped onto an ink drum and waved his arms excitedly until; he caught the attention of a fellow printer who also couldn't hear a sound. My father's hands shouted through the terrible noise of the printing presses, FIRE! FIRE!

TELL THE HEARING ONES!

His friend climbed onto a huge roll of newsprint. His fingers screamed to the other deaf workers, who ran to fellow workers who could hear. They pointed to the fire, which had now spread to the wall next to the only exit.

Not one of my father's friends left until everyone knew of the danger. My father was the last to escape. The printers stood in the street, broken glass at their feet. Read the passage then choose the correct words from a,b,c or d:

Nowadays, we use so many machines that life is unimaginable without them. Because of machines, we can travel farther and faster. We can access and process greater quantities of information at ever-increasing speeds. We can perform dangerous and complicated tasks more safely, efficiently, and precisely. In our homes, schools, hospitals, factories, stores, and offices, there are machines from the simplest gadgets to the most sophisticated electronic systems. In fact, we would have to travel very far indeed to find a place on this earth where we wouldn't encounter a machine of some kind.

The invention of machines and their widespread adoption have transformed human society. Beginning with the steam engine in 1705, the Industrial Revolution brought about massive economic and social changes that continued into the twentieth century. With the train and automobile came increasing urbanization and mobility, and the telegraph—and later the telephone, radio, and television—enabled people to communicate over long distances.

Technological progress that had been thousands of years in the making accelerated rapidly with the advent of the electronic computer in 1941.

Eight years later, the stored-program computer vastly improved programming procedures. As computer science took off in universities, far-fetched ideas that had once belonged to the realm of science fiction became realities. One such idea was to build mechanical creatures that could think and act independently.

The idea of mechanical men has fascinated thinkers and inventors for centuries. Elaborate mechanical toys and sophisticated creatures, such as a mechanical body that could write and draw, were constructed in France in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, but such inventions, as amazing as they were, ended up in various museums as objects of curiosity.

Read the following passage, then choose the correct answer from a, b, c or d:

Cairo, the Egyptian capital, is home to several historic suburbs, including the famous Khalifa District suburbs known for its ancient architecture. One of its most impressive landmarks is The Mosque of Sultan Hassan, located in Salah al-Din Square. It was built between 1356 and 1363. The mosque is remarkable for its massive size, innovative design, and lasting status as one of Cairo's most iconic monuments. Its construction began in 1356 and lasted for seven years, "without even a single day of idleness."

An inscription on the mosque notes the name of Amir Muhammad Ibn Biylik al-Muhsini as the supervisor of the mosque construction. Unusually, his name is placed near Sultan Hassan's in the inscription, demonstrating the importance of the project. The manual labor needed for construction was depleted by the ongoing ravages of the plague.

The mosque construction cost 30,000 dirhams daily. The total construction costs amounted to over one million dinars, making it the most expensive mosque in medieval Cairo. Even the Sultan is said to have become discouraged at times by the project cost. Financing for the mosque was made possible by a few factors: first, the austerity measures implemented by Manjaq, one of the amirs in charge of state affairs before Sultan Hassan reached maturity; second, the influx of wealth to the state caused by the plague-related deaths of many Mamluk amirs whose properties were subsequently transferred to the state treasury, including the enormous wealth of Amir Shaykhu; and third, the extortion of the Sultan's subjects during his reign.

The importance of the building project also attracted craftsmen from across the Mamluk empire, including far-away provinces such as Anatolia, which may explain the diversity and innovativeness of the mosque design and decoration. It is also believed that limestone was quarried for use in the mosque construction.

After dinner, my friends in the neighboring rooms in the hostel dropped in as usual for light talk. One was Rangappa, who taught the boys philosophy, and the other was Gopal from the mathematics section. Gopal was sharp as a knife edge when it came to mathematical matters, but poor fellow, he was very dumb and naive in other things. We liked him because he was a genius, and in a vague way, we understood that he was doing brilliant things in mathematics. Someday he hoped to contribute a paper on his subject that he believed would revolutionize human thought and conceptions. All I cared for in him was that he was an agreeable friend and patiently listened for hours.

The talk turned to English spelling and the conference we had with Brown tonight. I was incensed as usual. "But my dear fellow, what do you think they pay you for unless it is for dotting the i's and crossing the t's?" Gopal, who had been listening silently, suddenly became active. "I don't follow you," he said. "I said the English department existed solely for dotting the i's and crossing the t's." "Oh!" he said, opening his eyes wide, "I never thought so. Why should you do it?" His precise literal brain refused to move where it had no concrete facts or figures to grip. Symbols, if they entered his brain at all, came only as mathematical ones.

Rangappa answered, "Look here, Gopal. You have come across the expression 'Raining cats and dogs'?" "Yes," Gopal replied. "Have you actually seen cats and dogs falling down from the sky?" "No, no. Why?" Rangappa would have worried him a little longer, but the college clock struck ten, and I said, "Friends, I must bid you good night." "Good night," Gopal repeated mechanically and rose to go.

Read the following passage, then choose the correct answer from a, b, c or d:

Learning a new language has become a must nowadays. It involves progressing through graded stages and incorporating specific items and criteria. Apart from discussing the methods by which a person could learn a new language—as it is the concern of a teacher and not a learner—we will focus here on the steps and categories a learner should cover to acquire a new language.

One item that should be covered precisely in learning a new language is the grammar of that language. Grammar refers to the rules governing how words change their forms and combine to create sentences in a specific language. It isn't meant here that the learner of a new language should learn and memorize certain rules by heart, but it means that a learner should confidently form meaningful and correct sentences using the language rules.

Another item that should be covered is vocabulary. The meaning of a word is often understood through its relationship to other words. For example, we explain the meaning of "free" by saying it is the opposite of "busy." So, learning vocabulary should involve techniques such as learning antonyms and synonyms. At a certain level of language proficiency, a learner should also grasp the metaphorical use of words. Then comes the sounds of the language; the goal here is not merely to learn individual sounds—although that is essential at the beginning—but to understand elements like pitch, intonation, stress, and the connection between sounds and spelling. The paralinguistic features of language—a number of features of communication that occur outside the formal systems of language—should also be considered. These features fall into two broad categories: vocal paralinguistic features and physical paralinguistic features (facial expressions, gestures, posture, and echoing).

12-The main idea of the passage is the ……………….. .
a- results of learning a new language
b- appropriate stages to learn a new language
c- advantages of learning a new language
d- difficulties of learning a new language

13-The grammar of a language should be addressed ……… .

b- is less important than grammar
c- requires dictionary reference d- requires particular techniques

Read the following passage, then choose the correct answer from a, b, c or d:

Suzan packed a small suitcase, said goodbye to her mother, and hurried out of the house to catch the bus to the train station. When she arrived at the bus stop, no one was waiting there, suggesting a bus had just left. Suzan checked her watch anxiously. Since it would take at least twenty minutes to reach the station, she realized she had very little time to spare, even if a bus arrived immediately.

As she stood there, a taxi appeared, driving slowly down the road. Suzan hesitated because she knew the taxi fare to the station was at least twenty pounds—more than she could comfortably afford. However, she decided it was worth the expense to ensure she caught her train. She stopped the taxi and got in, explaining to the driver that she needed to reach the station before her train leaving at half past two. The driver nodded and reassured her, saying he would take a shortcut to save time.

Just as they exited a side street into the main road leading to the station, the taxi collided with a car. The impact was severe, and Suzan was thrown forward, hitting her head on the front seat. Both drivers got out of their vehicles and began arguing loudly. Suzan, frustrated and anxious about missing her train, stepped out and tried to intervene, but neither driver paid her any attention.

Suddenly, Suzan saw a bus heading toward the station. She quickly retrieved her suitcase from the taxi and ran toward the bus, which had stopped to let passengers off. Judy loved spending her weekends exploring the nearby forest with her father. The towering trees, the gentle rustle of leaves, and the colorful wildflowers made it her favorite place. Every trip was an adventure. One Saturday, while walking along their usual trail, Judy noticed something unusual. A small bird lay on the ground, unable to fly.

She gently picked it up and showed it to her father. "It looks like its wing is injured," he said. Judy felt a pang of sadness for the helpless creature. "Can we help it?" she asked eagerly. Her father nodded, "Of course. Let's take it home and see what we can do."

At home, they prepared a cozy bed for the bird in a small box lined with soft cloth. Judy researched how to care for an injured bird. She discovered that it needed a quiet space, fresh water, and seeds. Every morning, she checked on the bird, talking to it softly and encouraging it. With patience and care, the bird's strength gradually returned.

Two weeks later, it was finally time to let the bird go. Judy and her father carried the box back to the forest. Judy opened it slowly, giving the bird a chance to adjust. Judy watched it go with a smile. "Helping others, no matter how small, makes a big difference," her father said. Judy nodded, feeling proud of what they had accomplished. Read the following passage, then choose the correct answer from a, b, c or d:

Global health challenges, like pandemics, healthcare systems, and global health policies, are at the forefront of international concerns. Understanding these topics requires an exploration of complex and interconnected factors, ranging from biological conditions to socio-economic and political frameworks. Pandemics, such as the COVID-19 crisis, highlight the vulnerability of global health systems and the importance of international cooperation. A pandemic affects individuals and societies, causing widespread health, economic, and social disruptions.

One of the critical aspects of managing pandemics is understanding their effective and timely responses, including containment measures, vaccination strategies, and public health campaigns. The COVID-19 pandemic has underscored the significance of resilient healthcare systems. Countries with strong healthcare infrastructure have been better equipped to manage the crisis. Conversely, regions with underfunded and understaffed healthcare systems have struggled, highlighting disparities in healthcare access and outcomes. Global health policies require cooperation of governments, international organizations, and other stakeholders. They should be based on scientific evidence and consider the varying healthcare needs of different populations. Furthermore, global health challenges are often worsened by socio-economic factors. Poverty, for instance, limits access to healthcare services and nutritious food, thereby increasing susceptibility to diseases. Amelia Earhart was one of the most celebrated aviators of the 20th century. With her leather jacket, short cropped hair, and strong ambition, she represented the epitome of modern womanhood and inspired many. In 1932, she became the first woman to fly solo nonstop across the Atlantic, gaining her international fame. But it was her attempt to become the first woman to fly around the world that would forever enshroud her in mystery.

In 1937, Earhart, accompanied by her navigator, Fred Noonan, embarked on an ambitious round-the-world flight. Their journey would span over 29,000 miles, crossing the equator twice. On July 2nd, they took off from New Guinea, with their next stop being Howland Island, a tiny piece of land in the vast Pacific Ocean. However, Earhart and Noonan never reached their destination. Read the following passage, then choose the correct answer from a, b, c or d:

Recently, I was asked by my teacher to give a talk to the class about my hero. I didn't have to think for very long at all before I chose someone. Who will you talk about?' asked my friends. My grandfather,' I replied. Some of them laughed a little. I think they thought I was going to mention a sports player or a writer. But I told my class that without doubt, the person I look up to most of all is my 86-year-old grandfather, a shopkeeper. He is a man who never let life beat him.

My grandfather was born in Mumbai in the last century and grew up in poverty. When he was 13, he left home to find a better life. By the time he was 26 he'd started a business in the backstreets of Mumbai selling cheap fruit and vegetables. At 29, he'd fallen in love with my grandmother. All of this happened before he was 30.

But something even more dramatic happened in the years ahead. One day, as he crossed the street, he was struck by a car. Luckily, he survived. Unluckily, he lost his right leg. He could have given up on life, but he was, and still is, as strong as a bull. After he left hospital, he went back to work. Sometimes he used crutches, sometimes a wheelchair, but he continued working six days a week.

One of the best photographs was of him as a 28-year-old man. In the photograph, he had just climbed out of a swimming pool. He was a strong man and stood there posing for the camera, like a huge, dripping tree.

Now he is an older man. He only works two days a week in his shop. He doesn't want me to work in the family business. I'm not sure - it looks quite good fun. Besides, I'd like to work with my hero - the man who never let life beat him.

Read the following passage, then choose the correct answer from a, b, c or d:

Teenagers are spending up too many hours online a day, mindlessly swiping through social media without looking at any single piece of content for more than a few seconds, a unique study has found.

For the first time researchers used technology to record minute by minute what young people actually do on their smart phones – and were shocked by the compulsive way they "wasted" hours scrolling through social networking sites. A 17-year-old girl called Olympia was typical in terms of her use of social media. In one 24-hour period she spent 3.3 hours on Snapchat, 2.5 hours on Instagram, 2 hours on FaceTime, 2.4 hours on WhatsApp and 1.8 hours on Safari.

Although children from lower-income households were potentially more likely to engage in such relentless consumption of social media, Damon de lone, managing director of research group Revealing Reality, said: "We are seeing more and more relatively highly-educated girls from good backgrounds who are also spending this sort of time on screen.

"Olympia, who was revising for her exams during the study, told the researchers the only place she could relax was in the bath because she could not take in her phone - although she added she would take it in if it was water-proof. Others admitted they fell asleep at night while on their phones.

People need to reassess their relationship with smart phones otherwise it can become all-consuming where the world and all relationships are seen only through the phone.
